2020:0002:0348	Primarily Speaking (case for Happenstance)	Gary Hill	Experimental Television Center	1983	"A single-channel version of the multi-monitor, multi-channel installation of the same title. Primarily Speaking offers a series of variations on the themes set forth in Around & About. Integrating the social and political implications of electronic media. This pivotal tape extends the concerns and strategies of Around & About, coding, decoding and recoding the contexts of human interaction and more fully elaborating the earlier tape's expression of a longing for communion through language — "We are an act of faith," Hill entreats. Turning cliches like "take my word for it" into poetry through transformative juxtapositions, Hill employs a range of image/audio relationships and a more complex binocular construction that emphasizes the imagery, plays with context shifts, and foregrounds the implied dialogue." - from the Electronic Arts Intermix catalog. 1982-1983		3/4 in. News programs, commercials, soap operas, sports and game shows are presented as a deconstructivist video collage. Pantomime, stand-up comedy, and animation are used for the satire. Ed Bowes serves as chief writer and producer for an informal video repertory group, the Walsung Company (Ed Bowes, Tom Bowes, Karen Achenbach, Phil O'Reilly, Richard Tiernan, and Howard Grossman). Just as John Cage has said that a musical composition should have a beginning, middle, and end, but not necessarily in that order, so too does Ed Bowes' production and writing not provide this linear comfort. We find ourselves dropping in and out of parts of people's lives, examining their obsessions and very often their expectations, which do not gel with the activities going on in the video tape..." - Steve Kolpan, from the 1982 CAPS Video/Multi-Media Festival Catalogue		3/4 in. 2020:0002:1369	Flow	Yau Ching		1993	"This experimental documentary uses the life stories of a Chinese woman artist to explore alternatives to dominant versions of history. Having grown up in China during the Cultural Revolution, she went to the U.S. to study, and upon the failure of the students' movements in 1989, she settled in New York. Flow's narratives are constructed from her extremely personal and often satirical points of view. Fragments of memory speak to the master narrative of history. Yau Ching writes, "An exiled native speaks a language not fully comprehensible to her 'fellow-natives' any more. A part of her is not able to go back any more. Given its politically subversive content, the very fact that this tape can only be made here, when the native is not at home, highlights the limitations of 'home.' Her memory haunts her and blocks her from being assimilated by the dominant American society. She lives in this 'between-world dilemma,' deprived of the privileges of being fully identified as... human." - Yau Ching, yauching.com		VHS	Visual Studies Workshop Video Collection		no
